On Monday Next !

Lovers of horse racing will see plenty at the Sports on Monday next. As there are five horse events scheduled, with three heats to each, making fifteen contests, patrons of the sport of kings will have a busy afternoon, to say nothing of such minor sports as the wheelbarrow race, three-legged race, and thread-the-needle contest.

The favorite in the main event to be run at 3.30, is Spark Plug, owned and to be ridden by Skewamboob, a brave from the Dundas Reserve; with that good old stake horse Skibbreen, a strong second choice. Much interest is being taken in this race, and tryouts are being held every morning just after dawn, with the railbirds keeping close tab on every performance.

Taken all in all, it should prove to be a big day's sport with lots of amusement for everybody.

Be on Hand Early.

To commence the day right, a local sportsman has asked The Sun to announce a prize of $2 to the first person seen coming down Main St. after 10 on the morning of Dominion Day with a pair of white pants on. The judge will be a well known real estate man from Missouri.

Canada's International Responsibility

Has Canada any responsibility internationally? Should a nation of only eight million people, with half a continent to develop and with many and large domestic problems of its own to solve, concern itself with conditions and affairs in other countries, on other continents, and throughout the world? Is it the duty of Canada to assist in bringing about a solution of world problems and in the development of a larger spirit of brotherhood among all peoples and nations?

An overwhelming majority of Canadian people have answered these questions in the affirmative on many occasions and in various ways. From earliest days the Canadian churches have recognized such responsibility in their foreign mission work, their activities including the establishment of colleges, schools, hospitals and medical services, as well as the teaching of the ideals and precepts of the Christ. Our Government said "Yes" when they sent the Canadian contingent to fight for liberty and justice in South Africa, and later when they authorized Canada's young manhood in its hundreds of thousands to participate in the Great War. Canada's Parliament, as representative of all Canadians, emphatically agreed when it set the seal of its approval to the affixing of Canada's signature to the covenant of the League of Nations.

Canadian opinion is well defined on this question, but, as was inevitable in view of our pioneer and largely undeveloped state, with many domestic difficulties and problems to be solved, our distance from the Old World, and our geographical, commercial and social connections with the United States which has for so long accepted the Monroe doctrine and its policy of isolation from participation in world affairs, there are quite a few Canadians who are either opposed to Canada accepting any international responsibilities, or who relegate such matters to a place of very minor importance.

The danger in a country like Canada is not that too much attention may be given to international questions, and our responsibility in regard thereto; rather Canada's danger lies in the overemphasis of sectional interests at home, whether those interests arise from considerations of geography, religion, race or occupation. In their own interests Canadians must be Canadians before anything else—not Easterners or Westerners, farmers or manufacturers, French-speaking or English-speaking, Protestant or Roman Catholic, but Canadians. Only so can Canada realize its high destiny and play her part worthily in the larger affairs of the world.

Whatever old statutes may say, Canada has passed forever from the old position as a colony dependency of England. In the language of the Constitution of the Irish Free State, the dominions of the Empire are recognized as "co-equal members of the Community of Nations forming the British Commonwealth." It is now not only our right but our duty to think, not merely as provinces, but as a Dominion, or even as an Empire, but internationally as a nation in a world brotherhood of nations.

Even assuming it to be desirable, it is not possible to disregard our international status and the responsibilities which attach to that position. Even if Canada had not sent a soldier to Europe in the Great War, this country would have suffered enormous loss, and had Germany been victorious Canada, in common with the rest of the world, would have suffered. Nations cannot approach problems today from the standpoint of a narrow, selfish nationalism which thinks it is promoting its own interests best when it is gaining some advantage at the expense of other nations. History has proven that to be an entirely false conception. We cannot ignore international problems, and in our interest we must approach them from the larger point of view that a nation best serves its interests when it renders the greatest service to humanity. We must adopt and follow the Christian rather than the pagan ideal.

If any part of Canada, or any section of the world for that matter, could ignore international responsibilities it would be the broad practices of the West. But can even this country afford to do so? Last year Western Canada harvested probably the best crop, taking quantity and quality together; it ever produced, and yet having regard to price realized and cost of production and marketing, many farmers are not very much ahead. Why? The Canadian tariff may be partly responsible; costs of transportation to world markets partly responsible; costs of labor partly responsible. But without minimizing these, the fact remains a bushel of Canadian wheat on board ship at Hamburg, valued at $1.50 in Canadian currency, would cost the German buyer at the present rate of exchange 10,000 marks, or the equivalent of almost $2,500 Canadian currency at the pre-war rate of exchange. And what is true in the case of Germany is true in varying degrees of other European countries which would be purchasers of our wheat. The result is that millions of people in Europe who want our wheat cannot afford to buy it. Why? Because of the international situation. Canada is the loser and Europe is the sufferer.

It is in Canada's purely selfish and economic interests to take an even larger interest and responsibility in connection with international affairs. But greater than these is the consideration we owe to the building up of a broader, better humanity and spirit of world brotherhood, and in the development of such mutual goodwill and understanding between nations nothing better than the League of Nations has yet been devised. It is not perfect, nor can it reach its full power and usefulness until all nations, including Germany, Russia and the United States, are incorporated in its membership. The League is gaining in prestige, and inasmuch as nothing succeeds like success, and as nothing but success can induce the United States and other countries to come in; it is Canada's proud privilege to do all in its power to support the League and assist in interpreting it to our neighbors to the south.

Child Labor In China

Women and Children Are Cheap in the Orient

Mrs. Takling Shin, a welfare worker of Hong Kong, who is now in Europe studying conditions, says that women and children are especially cheap in China.

In that country there are 400,000,000 people, with only 4 per cent. literate, and they die off by thousands, she asserts. When a child is a week or two old she is taken by her mother to the factory, laid in a corner, and fed at intervals. If she survives, in a year or two she Noddies about among the machines. At 4 or 5 she learns the rudiments of the work, and at 6 or 8 is an adept, taking her place in the ranks of regular workers. They work from twelve to sixteen and a half hours a day.

Eastern Salmon For B.C.

First Attempt to Introduce Miramichi Species to Western Waters

In order to introduce the famous Miramichi salmon into British Columbia, millions of salmon eggs from Newmarket, New Brunswick, have been sent to Terrace, British Columbia, where they will be propagated at the Lakeview hatchery. This will be the first attempt that has been made to propagate in this province this noted eastern species, which, unlike the Pacific salmon, does not die directly after spawning, but returns to salt water.

2 Years' Backache Subdued by "Nerviline"

"Backache was the bane of my life, and for two years I was so lame as to be unable to work," writes E. S. Sisson, from Georgetown, W.Va. in Smith Bros. Drug Store. I heard of Nerviline being a wonderful remedy for backache, and decided to try Nerviline. Thanks to Nerviline, my two years' backache has been rubbed away, and to-day I am perfectly well. THANKFUL MOTHERS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little one she would use nothing else. The Tablets give such results that the mother has nothing but words of praise and thankfulness for them. Among the thousands of mothers throughout Canada who praise the Tablets is Mrs. David A. Anderson, New Glasgow, N.S., who writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children and from my experience I would not be without them. I would give every other mother to keep a box of the Tablets in the house." The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach; they cure constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Natural Resources Bulletin

Extent of Forest Resources of Saskatchewan Not Generally Known

The Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa, says:

While Saskatchewan is more generally known as one of the prairie provinces, owing to its very large grain-growing areas, very few, even of the province's own population, realize the vastness of the timbered areas in the northern half of the province.

A survey of the forest resources of Saskatchewan shows that the province has available 7,950,000,000 board feet of saw material, divided approximately as follows: 3,000,000,000 feet of spruce; 4,000,000,000 feet of poplar; 500,000,000 feet of balsam; 100,000,000 feet of balsam; and 50,000,000 feet of larch.

The use of Miller's Worm Powders insures healthy children so far as the ailments attributable to worms are concerned. A high mortality among children is traceable to worms. These sap the strength of infants so that they are unable to maintain the battle for life and succumb to weakness. This preparation gives promise of health and keeps it.

Wisdom Of Planting A Shelter Belt Is Unfolded By A Western Farmer

One of the most indefatigable and successful tree-planters in Western Canada is John Hupka, of Winnipeg, Alberta. Mr. Hupka is first of all a farmer and plant trees to make his farm a greater producer of crops, as well as a more beautiful place upon which to live. But let Mr. Hupka himself tell the story:

"There is no doubt that if farmers could plant their faith in that piece of ground which they are cultivating for production of crops, and instead of having only a feverish desire in their two varieties are giving the best satisfaction and the average of annual growth is better than of any other tree under the same conditions. My plantation is only ten years old and the average height is eighteen feet. My soil is heavy clay of chocolate color.

"Although, as I mentioned before, my shelter belt consists of six rows of trees, I would not advise to plant more than four rows in the following order: First row, Caragana; second row, Manitoba Maple, alternating with mind for immediate financial returns, would try to work their lands with a view for permanency, having in their vision an "ideal home" as their ultimate goal, their love in that direction would give them the required perseverance to accomplish it.

"First of all let be understood that the climate in this part of Southern Alberta, is about as dry as any on the Canadian prairies, and therefore, my experience will apply only to such dry areas.

"The land should be quite level; so that when the snow is melting in spring the water may soak into the ground without running off. Shelter belts should be placed to stop the force of the prevailing winds. In our locality it is the north wind which causes the snow to drift more than any other, therefore, in laying out my shelter belt I planted the trees from east to west. The shelter belt is six rows wide, not too wide to act as a solid obstruction to the wind in which case the snow would drift up and break down the trees, but narrow enough to permit the snow to blow through and drift up on the north side which is used as our garden and orchard. In this way the snow that drifts through is put to excellent use the following year as additional moisture. The second consideration is the preparation of the soil before planting. The land must be well summer-fallowed for at least two years and not in any case prairie-rod.

"The strip of ground should be well plowed in May, the year previous to planting, from ten inches to twelve inches deep, and if it is impossible on account of dryness of the soil, it should be plowed to such a depth as is possible to do good work, and plowed deeper as soon as the ground is in good condition. After the ground is plowed, it should be kept clean by cultivating until planting time.

"Before planting trees the moisture should be at least four feet deep, otherwise it is better to defer planting for another year. If the location is chosen close to the south fence the first row should be planted at least 30 feet away from it, and the strip of land between the fence and trees should be kept clean as summer-fallow, so as to store and supply the necessary moisture to the trees in dry season. The bare strip on the north side doesn't need to be that wide the first few years, therefore, the garden may be planted only sixteen feet from the last row, but after the trees get larger and they need more moisture, that strip should be widened.

"The best trees which stand the most dry weather, and are the most free from insect-pests, are Caragana and Manitoba Maple. These Caragana, the rows and trees—four feet apart. Then twenty-four feet space left for cultivation while trees are small, and again two rows of trees same variety but in reversed order. After the trees grow taller, the space between will fill out with Russian Thistle, which I left will act as a mulch preventing the drying of the soil, and making cultivation unnecessary. Thus, the only thing left is to keep the outside cultivated to prevent weeds and grass from robbing the moisture. If rightly planned the work may be easily accomplished with wide implements like harrows, cultivators or discs running over the ground at spare moments whilst going or coming from the fields, thereby no time being lost.

"Now what about the benefit of such belts? There are many, but I shall only refer to those which probably will appeal to most readers. As I mentioned before, the north side is the ideal ground for vegetable gardens, and we have plenty of vegetables every year, no matter whether it rains or not. The same applies to the orchard, although my orchard is sheltered from three sides, viz: South, west and east. It was planted in Spring of 1915, but what joy. We had bushels of plums, wild and cultivated, and plenty of other fruit like crabapples, currants, raspberries and cherries, and I believe we soon will have some standard apples.

"I have told you about the business end of my shelter belt," says John Hupka, "but what about the beauty and fragrance of the orchard in spring? The wealth of plum and apple blossom! I feel as if transported to dreamland, all sorrows and cares forgotten through the music of our feathered songsters and buzzing bees. Talk about the bald-headed prairie. Of course it was, but didn't we come here to adopt it, to improve it, and make it fit for our homes?"

Invents Automatic Cannon

Rapid Firing Gun Can Be Used in Airplane

Invention of a rapid firing automatic cannon, capable of firing one and a quarter pound shells at the rate of 120 a minute, has been perfected by John M. Browning, of Ogden, noted inventor of firearms. It is announced by his brother, J. Edward Browning.

The cannon, designed for use in airplanes, as well as on land or sea, according to Edward Browning, has a barrel which measures in diameter only one and one-half inches, but weighs 160 pounds when mounted on a tripod and can be fired from any position without interference with the accuracy of the aim, he said. The range is seven miles.

Manitoba Boys' and Girls' Club

The Boys' and Girls' Club movement in Manitoba began concurrently with the agricultural instruction grant being made available in 1914. Its development has been noteworthy, as there are now 225 clubs, 1,500 branches and over 30,000 members. Last year 215 club fairs were held at which over 30,000 children exhibited.

Utilization Of Flax Straw May Prove Of Very Great Importance To Western Canada

The uses to which flax straw may be put, and to which to an increasing extent, is being put, are commented on by the New York Times. The investigations that have been conducted in Winnipeg have attracted, apparently considerable attention. The New York Times says:

"Canada's enormous quantity of straw is now being utilized in numerous remunerative ways. For many years the problem of how to utilize the waste of straw from the western flax crop has been the subject of investigation and study. Regarding the potential value of this enormous waste, the Canadian Pacific Railway made an arduous investigation of its utilization and has succeeded in putting it to productive use.

The straw was known to have a certain value for its fibre, being similar in this respect, though of inferior grade, to the straw cultivated for the production of fibre flax, but after leaving the threshing machine the fibre value of this flax straw was destroyed, even for production of commercial tow, owing to the manner in which the straw was broken up in the threshing operation. In consequence of this difficulty, early investigations were along the lines of utilizing the waste straw as a pulping material for the manufacture of paper. The investigations conducted in this connection were entirely successful, and the resulting product was an exceptionally high grade of paper suitable for high-class writing paper and similar purposes. This research was carried to a semi-commercial scale, but the cost of production of the pulp was too high for practical purposes.

"Further investigations have been inaugurated by the Honorary Council for Scientific and Industrial Research in efforts to produce pulp from which a cheap grade of newspaper could be manufactured. These results have not so far been disclosed.

"Today the utilization of these vast quantities of waste straw is nearer to accomplishment than ever before," states the Canadian Pacific Railway. "Modern Canadian-invented and perfected machinery has made possible the recovery of the flax seed without destruction of the straw through a new form of threshing machine. This at once removed the old obstacle to the utilization of the fibre content of the straw, and sets free and available enormous new supply of raw material for the manufacture of the lower grade of linen products, which is certain to mean an important industrial development in Western Canada in the not distant future.

"Meanwhile a successful effort has been made in Manitoba near Winnipeg in the use of this waste flax straw by the production of an insulating material which has been proved to be an efficient non-conductor of heat and cold, and is being used in western construction work as linings between the walls and under the roofs, to keep out the cold, and appears to have demonstrated effectively its success in these relations. It has been used in public buildings, as an example of the insulating plants—ice, cold storage and others—and is becoming general in its use in private dwellings.

"While this is only a beginning, it has created a situation more satisfactory for the future marketing of flax straw, and now its use for two purposes for upholstery has developed a desire on the part of industries south of the international boundary to purchase the straw and a large-tonnage contract was entered into late in the past year; a tow mill is to be erected in Manitoba to take care of this new market.

"This is an interesting western commercial development, befitting of mention for the future marketing of flax straw, and now its use for two purposes for upholstery has developed a desire on the part of industries south of the international boundary to purchase the straw and a large-tonnage contract was entered into late in the past year; a tow mill is to be erected in Manitoba to take care of this new market.

Colony Gardens in Sweden

Industrial Workers Have Vegetables and Fruit to Sell

The regular weekend exodus of 7,000 industrial workers armed with garden tools to one of the country's signs of spring in the Swedish capital. Every one of these amateur gardeners has his own "colony lot" in the large co-operative garden colonies situated in what appears to be country, though actually within the city limits. Here he grows his own flowers and vegetables, and finds a retreat from the factories and city streets.

The 7,000 colonists are grouped into fifty different garden sections in the outskirts of the city, and the administrative work is in the hands of co-operative garden societies. The plots of ground worked by individuals vary in size from 1,800 to 5,500 square feet, and the rentals range from $250 to $450 for the season. Greens, vegetables, strawberries and various other garden products are raised, enough to supply the workers' own table and yield him a small profit beside.

Great Age Authenticated

Hungarian Woman, 125, Earns Living Giving Medical Advice

The latest entrant for international old age honors is a Hungarian woman by the name of Antonia Lippel, whose age is authenticated at 125 years. She is reported to be in excellent health and very active.

In answer to inquiries as to her health, Antonia says she wore glasses until she was 95, but since then she has been able to see clearly without artificial aid. She has been a widow for 50 years, and earns a living by giving medical advice in her community.

More Industrial Disputes

Industrial disputes caused a greater time loss in the month of May than in April. During May there were in existence at some time or other 31 disputes, involving 4,707 employees and a time loss of 65,188 working days, as compared with 23 strikes in April, involving 2,300 employees and a time loss of 34,553 working days.

NINE HUNDRED MILES OF GAME

(1) Trail of the hangar built to accommodate three persons (2) The "hangar" built to accommodate three persons (3) Not bad for a lake trout.

There still remains between Sudbury and the Manitoba boundary in Northern Ontario, a large tract of land with a nine hundred mile front in which the sportsman may still seek his prey in the virgin wilderness, and the vacationist find beautiful, health spots unspoiled by advances of civilization. Black streams and large rivers from the northern hills flow by huge pine-covered slopes, or drop in cataracts from rocky heights to the quiet plains below from which the mountains, rising from the trees, afford exquisite panoramas of the peaceful and varied game.

For over thirty years the Canadian Pacific Railway has been running daily trains through this district, but there are only twelve points along its 550 miles of line with a population of over two hundred people. Most of the little stations are but jumping places for the sportsman who know the value of the country, and although there is every reason for further development there has been little or no accommodation for those who would enjoy the country from the standpoint of scenery or sport without suffering the discomfort attendant upon actual camp life. For this reason, the new that three Bungalow Camps are being built in suitable spots after the style of those operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway in the Rockies is being received with delight in all quarters. When these camps are opened about July first there will undoubtedly be a great influx of holiday makers of both sexes, the camps being in every way suitable to the needs of the woman who, if they do not care for the more strenuous adventures of their husbands and brothers, may pass the time winning Canadian titles, "in the pine-fragrant breezes." The Bungalow Camps consist of a main building which serves as a dining and recreation hall and in which are the service departments, surrounded by a number of smaller bungalows designed to accommodate one, two or four persons. These are simply but comfortably equipped with the necessary comforts without the dispensable trimmings, the idea being to avoid heavy overhead charges. The new camps are situated in choice locations on the French River, in the famous of the finest fishing stands on the continent, black bass, red and speckled trout and muskellunge being chiefly caught.

Mrs. Purnell was as keenly alive as ever to the hope that the young ranch owner might some day incline toward her little girl, but she was sensitive also to the impression which the Rex hills had made upon her. Her life with Mr. Purnell had not brought her many luxuries, and perhaps she overvalued their importance. She thought Miss Rexhill a most imposing young woman and she believed in the impeccability of the well-to-do. Her heart was still warmed by the memory of the courtesy with which she had been treated by the Senator's daughter, and was not without the gratification of feeling that it had been a tribute to her own worth. She had recalled Dorothy afterward for her frank speech to Miss Rexhill at the hotel, and she felt that further shurs on her were uncalled for.

"I'm sure that Miss Rexhill treated us as a lady should," she said tartly. "She acted more like one than you did. If I do have to call on her, I'll see as kind and sweet as could be. She's got a tender heart. I could see that when she up and gave me that blotter, just because I remarked that it reminded me of your childhood."

Mrs. Holmberg Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Viking, Alta.—"From the time I was 16 years old I would get such sick feelings in the lower part of my abdomen, followed by cramps and vomiting. This kept me from my work (I help my parents on the farm) as I usually had to go to bed for the rest of the day. Or at times I would have to walk the floor. I suffered in this way until a friend induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very satisfactory results so far and am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends. I was very glad I tried it for I feel like a different person now. I don't have those troubles."

— ODELLA HOLMBERG, Box 94, Viking, Alta.

Letters like this establish the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They tell of the relief from such pains and ailments after taking it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ailments in this country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials prove this fact.

If you doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lowell, Mass., for Mrs. Pinkham's private text-book and learn more about it.

claimed petulantly. "What did it amount to? You talk as though it were something worth having. She was so seldom in a pet that her mother now strove to make allowance for her."

"I'm not saying that it's of any value, Dorothy, except to me; but it was kind of her to seem to understand why I wanted it."

"It wasn't kind of her. She just did it to get rid of us, because we bored her. Oh, mother, you're daff about the Rexhills, why not admit it and be done with it? You think they're perfect, but I tell you they're not—they're not. They've been behind all our troubles here. They've—"

Her voice broke under the stress of her emotion and she rose to her feet.

"Dorothy, if you have no self-respect, at least have some. I won't have the blotter in the house." The strain was proving more than the girl's nerves could stand. "I won't hear about it any longer. I'm going to—"

"Dorothy!"

For all the good that Mrs. Purnell's tone of authority did it might well have fallen upon the wind. She hastily followed her daughter, who had rushed from the room, and overtook her just in time to prevent her from destroying the little picture. Her own strength could not have sufficed to deter the girl in her purpose, if the latter had not realized in her heart the shameful way in which she was treating her mother.

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself, child? Look in that glass at your face! No wonder you don't think you look like the sweet child in the picture. You don't look like her now, not at all like her. That was why I wanted the blotter, to remind me of the way you used to look."

"I'm sorry, mother."

Blushing deeply as she recovered her self-control, Dorothy stole a glance at her reflection in the looking-glass of the bureau, before which she stood, and shyly contrasted her angry expression, of countenance with the sweet one of the child on the blotter.

Suddenly she started, and leaned toward the mirror, staring at something she saw there. The blood seemed driven from the surface of her skin, her lips were parted; her eyes dilated. She drew a swift breath of amazed exultation, and turned to her mother, who had viewed the sudden transformation with surprise.

"Oh, hurry, Gypsy, hurry!" she breathed into the pony's twitching ears.

Her way was not far; for she was going first to the hotel, but that other street. Into the moonlight after Gordon would be a long journey, and no time could be wasted now. She was going to see Helen Rexhill, not as a pliant bearing the olive branch, but as a champion to wage battle in behalf of the missing ranchman. She no longer thought of giving him up, and knew that she might now keep the love which she had won for her very own made her reel on the pony's back from pure joy. She was his as he was hers, but the Rexhills were his enemies; she knew that point-tively now, and she meant to defeat them at their own game. If they would tell her where Gordon was, they might go free for all she cared; if they would not, she would give them over to the vengeance of Crawling Water, and she would not worry about what might happen to them. Meanwhile she thanked her lucky stars that Trowbridge had promised to keep a man at the big place.

She tied her pony at the hitching-rack in front of the hotel and entered the office. Like most of the men in the town, the proprietor was her ardent admirer, but he had never seen her before in such radiant mood. He took his cigar from between his lips, and doffed his Stetson hat, which he wore indoors and out, with elaborate grace.

"Yes, Miss Rexhill, in, in the parlor, I think. Would you like me to step up and let her know you're here?"

"No, thank you, I'll go right up myself," said Dorothy; her smile doubly charming because of its suggestion of triumph.

Miss Rexhill, entirely unaware of what was brewing for her, was gazing by the flickering light of one of the big oil lamps, with her back to the doorway, and so did not immediately note Dorothy's presence in the room. Her face flushed with annoyance and she arose, when she recognized her visitor.

"You will please pardon me, but I do not care to receive you, she said primly.

This beginning, natural enough from Helen's standpoint, after what her father had told her in Moran's office, convinced Dorothy that she had read the writing on the blotter correctly. She held her ground, aggressively, between Miss Rexhill and the door.

"You must hear what I have to say to you," she declared quietly. "I have not come here to make a social call."

"Isn't it enough for me to tell you that I do not wish to talk to you?" Helen lifted her brows and shrugged her shoulders. "Surely, it should be enough. Will you please stand aside so that I may go to my room?"

"No, I won't! You can't go until you've heard what I've got to say." Stung by the other woman's contemptuous tone, and realizing that the situation put her at a social disadvantage, Dorothy forced an aggressive tone into her voice, and to the ear.

"Very well!" Miss Rexhill shrugged her shoulders disdainfully, and resumed her seat. "Perhaps you don't engage in a vulgar row. Since I must listen to you, I must, but at least I need not talk to you, and I won't."

"You know that Gordon Wade has disappeared?" Helen made no response to this, and Dorothy hid her lip in anger. "I know that you know it," she continued. "I know that you know where he is. Perhaps, however, you don't know that his life is in danger. If you tell me where he is, I can help him. What the situation is, I know. The low throaty note of suffering in her voice brought a stiletto-like look into the eyes of the other woman, but no response.

"Miss Rexhill," Dorothy went on, after a short pause. "You and Mr. Wade were friends once. If you are not now. Perhaps you don't realize just how serious the situation is here in the town, where nearly everybody likes him, and what would happen to you and your father, if I told what I know of her?"

Helen turned abruptly in her chair, her face white with anger.

"I said that I would not talk to you," she burst out, "but your impudence is so—so insufferable—so absolutely insufferable, that I must speak. You say you will tell people what you know about me. What do you know about me?"

"I am sure that you know where Gordon is!"

"You are sure of nothing of the kind. I do not know where Mr. Wade is, and why should I tell you if I did? Suppose I were to tell what I know about you? I don't believe the whole of it is known in Crawling Water yet. You—you must be insane."

"About me?" Dorothy's surprise was genuine. "There is nothing you could tell any one about me."

Miss Rexhill laughed scornfully, a low, withering laugh that brought a flush to the girl's cheeks, even though her conscience told her that she had nothing to be ashamed of. Dorothy stared at the other woman with wide-open, puzzled eyes, diverted for the moment from her own purpose.

"At least, you need not expect me to help you," Helen said acidulously. "I have my own affairs to attend to. I have seen Mr. Wade at one time and valued his friendship. You have taken from me my respect for him, and you have taken from him his self-respect. Quite likely you had no respect for yourself, and so you had nothing to lose. But if you'll stop to consider, you may see how impudent you are to appeal to me so brazenly."

"What are you talking about?" Dorothy's eyes, too, were blazing now, but more in championship of Wade than of herself. She still did not fully understand the drift of what Miss Rexhill had said.

"Really, you are almost amusing," Helen looked at her through half-closed lids. "You are quite frankish, suppose you must be a moral degenerate, or something of the sort." She waited for the insult to sink in, but Dorothy was fairly dazed and bewildered by their true names.

"Do you want me to call things by their true names?" Dorothy asked. "Yes," answered Dorothy. "I do. Tell me what you are talking about."

"I don't mind," Helen said. "Plain speaking has never bothered me. It's the deed that's horrible, not the name. You were found in Mr. Moran's office with Mr. Wade, late at night, making love. Do you dare to come now to me and say—"

"That is not true!" The denial came from Dorothy with an intensity that would have carried conviction to any person less infuriated than the woman who faced her. "Oh!" Dorothy only raised her hands to her throat as though strangled by grief. I never dreamed you meant that. It's a deliberate lie!"

In the grip of her emotions, neither of the girls had noticed the entrance of Senator Rexhill. Helen saw him first and dramatically pointed to him. "There is my father. Ask him!"

"I do not need to ask him what I've done," Dorothy said. "He would suffocate. No one would believe that story of Gordon, whatever they might think of me."

"Ask me? Ask me what?" the Senator nervously demanded. He had in his pocket a telegram just received from Washington, stating that the cavalry would be sent from Fort Mackenzie only at the request of the Governor of Wyoming. The Governor was not at all likely to make such a request, and Rexhill was more worried than he had been before, in years. He could only hope that Tug Bailey would escape capture. "Who is in here?" he asked. "Who is in here?"

"She has come here to plead for Gordon Wade—to demand that I tell her where he is now. I don't know, of course! I know of no know; but I wouldn't tell her if I did." Helen spoke triumphantly.

The Tobacco with a heart

Destruction Spread In Thickly Populated Area By Eruption Of Mt. Etna

Catania.—The smoldering, fruitful and thickly populated slopes of Mount Etna and the surrounding country as the correspondent of the Associated Press saw them in past, have now become, with ghastly suddenness, the "land of dreadful night."

Through the thick darkness, which can almost be felt, glows the crimson of the lava fire flowing from the broken lips of the craters, extending for miles and gradually growing darker as the molten mass cools and hardens, until cracks and crevices appear on the surface through which can be seen bubbling up the boiling lava.

The fields of Fiume, Treddo, Diana and Calatabiano, once green and beautiful, now covered with heavy deposits of dust and cinders, tremble and heave beneath the feet, while the roaring sounds accompanying the eruption mingle with the rumblings of torrids through the darkness carrying away the refugees and their possessions from the doomed villages.

Approaching the volcano masses of fiery material thrown up from the smaller craters can be seen. They roll slowly down the mountain side, and above them are dense clouds of smoke and vapor. One by one, the splendid homes and villas are overborne and destroyed. Vineyards and gardens have been consumed in the intense heat long before the lava reached them, throwing off myriads of sparks, and finally smoulder down into grim darkness.

At Castiglione the inhabitants linger in their houses, collecting and packing their possessions, though doubtless most of these must be abandoned along the road.

The visit of King Victor Emmanuel was the outstanding event of the day. The King, wherever he appeared, was the object of intense enthusiasm, the women especially crowding around the royal motor, holding up their children and telling them to look on the royal deliverer, crying: "Long live the King; he will see that we have all we need."

Safeguarding Food

Supplies In War

British House of Lords Discusses Submarine Development

London.—The question of safeguarding the nation's food supplies in war-time, especially from "Empire sources, in view of the development of the submarine, was raised in the House of Lords.

The Earl of Clarendon, speaking for the Government, was reluctant to give publicity to the Government's deliberations inasmuch as the subject was closely connected with Imperial defence. The Duke of Devonshire, Secretary for the Colonies, subsequently stated that the matter was receiving close attention and would be considered by the Imperial Conference.

To Protect Tourists In China

London.—Great Britain, in collaboration with the United States and other powers, is considering what measures can be taken in co-operation with the Chinese Government for the safeguarding of foreign passengers while travelling on Chinese railroads. One suggestion considered is the formation of a Chinese gendarmerie under the command of allied and United States officers.

Passengers From The Orient

Regina.—Carrying passengers from the Orient for Great Britain and other European countries a special boat train operating on a second section of C.P.R. No. 2 passed through here June 19th. In addition to the other passengers the train carried a coach load of Chinese in bond bound for the West Indies. Passengers on the train crossed the Pacific on the Empress of Canada.

Trotsky Hurls Threat At Great Britain

Bolshevik Leader Directs Hate Toward British and Italians

Moscow.—An attack on Great Britain, hints of a Russo-French rapprochement and a plea for "more metal in our national character," marked an address by Leon Trotsky, Soviet War Minister, before the all-Russian congress of metal workers. "If an ultimatum is presented to us," he explained, referring to the recent British notes, "let us create a detachment of airplanes. If a coup d'état occurs in Bulgaria, let us build an other detachment of airplanes, and if there is a coup d'état in Persia build more planes."

M. Trotsky said Great Britain and Italy had, according to information at hand, assisted in the coup d'état in Bulgaria, and the British had aided in the nationalist overthrow in Persia. Declaring that Russia's losses in the world war were overwhelming, greater than Britain's, Trotsky added: "It was for this purpose, perhaps, that Lord Curzon felt strong enough to deliver us his ten-day ultimatum."

High Grade Stock Excites Comment

Convention Delegates Impressed With Showing From Saskatchewan University

Saskatoon.—Advanced lectures on soils and forage crops and a livestock show were features of the programme of the first day of the convention of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists, held at the University of Saskatchewan.

Dr. F. J. Ailway, of the University of Minnesota, lectured on "The Diagnosis of the Unproductivity of Soils," and A. J. Peters, of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, spoke on "Forage Crop Problems in the Northwest States."

The show of the university livestock excited comment from the delegates. President L. S. Klink, of the University of British Columbia, said: "No college in Canada has a string of horses to compare with those shown." The large numbers and the high average quality of the other kinds of stock also impressed the visitors.

Schooners Reported to be Carrying Liquor and Furs for Sale

Rome, Alaska.—Liquor aboard for trafficking was a factor in the detention of four United States trading schooners at East Cape, Siberia, by the Russian Soviet Government, according to information received here.

Besides a license for trading, it is reported that the Soviet has imposed an extremely high tax on skins exported from Siberia. J. Costell, of Nome, owner of the Belinda, one of the seized schooners, is reported to have a thousand fox skins that he has been trying to ship out of that country by that vessel.

The entrance of liquor into Siberia is absolutely opposed by the Soviet authorities.

House Approves the Sales Tax Amendment

Aim Is To Do Away With Present Varying Scale

Ottawa.—The House of Commons adopted the resolution on the sales tax in the committee of ways and means practically without discussion. The aim of the amendment is to substitute a general sales tax of six per cent. instead of a varying scale, as at present in effect, explained Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance. He hoped that the new system would increase revenue and simplify collections.

A bill to amend the special war revenue act, to give effect to the resolution, was separately introduced and given first reading.

Insulin From Dogfish

Supply More Prolific Than From Cattle, Says Alberta Professor

Seattle.—Insulin, the new agent for the treatment for diabetes, has been isolated in promising quantities from dogfish taken in Puget Sound, Dr. J. B. Collip, professor of bio-chemistry in the University of Alberta, told an audience here. Dr. Collip, in his laboratory at Edmonton, obtained more insulin from the pancreatic glands of seven tons of dogfish than he could have obtained from an equal quantity of pancreas from cattle.

Dr. Collip lectured in connection with the annual meeting of the Pacific Northwest Medical Association in progress here.

Preparing Decree To Take Over Industries In The Ruhr Valley

Manitoba Theatres and Stores Cannot Open on Lord's Day

Winnipeg.—Despite the decision of Sir Hugh John Macdonald that the Lord's Day Act is of no effect in Manitoba, theatres and places of business will not be permitted to open Sundays, in the opinion of Hon. R. W. Craig, attorney-general.

Following a conference between Mr. Craig, Crown Prosecutor Graham and John Allan, deputy attorney-general, Mr. Craig issued a statement that places of amusement which attempted to remain open Sundays would be liable to have their licenses cancelled and their employees would be open to prosecution under an English law of Charles II. Storekeepers opening Sundays also would be liable under the old law.

Mr. Craig urged complete revision of the federal law after a decision handed down by the Privy Council in the appeal from the ruling of the Manitoba courts that Sunday trains to the beaches are legal in Manitoba.

Government Probes Canteen Activities

Witness Asserts Profit Enhanced By Sales to Arabs

London.—Some remarkable evidence concerning the army and navy canteen board's dealings with the Arabs in Mesopotamia was given at the governmental enquiry into the workings of the canteens. It was asserted by one of the witnesses that whereas the managers of the canteens had been instructed to sell only to British and Indian troops, they had also sold to Arabs at one hundred per cent. extra, the margin finding its way into the managers' pockets.

Another assertion made was that fourteen tons of butter had been sent to Constantinople when there was room for only one ton, the result being that most of the remainder was spoiled. An ex-officer of the canteen board, it was also alleged, had purchased goods for £25,000, for which other firms had to pay £14,000.

Australia Deporting Radicals

London.—The London Morning Post's Melbourne correspondent cables that the Australian Federal Government has decided to carry out the recommendation of the special board of enquiry and deport the Irish Republican envoys, Father O'Flanagan and O'Kelly, who went to Australia several weeks ago to foster Irish Republican sentiment there.

Duesseldorf.—A decree providing for confiscation of all Ruhr Valley industries, the products of which are applicable to the reparations accounts, and forced operation of the plants by the Germans, is being prepared by General De Goutte, commander of the occupation forces, it is announced.

Arrangements for promulgation of the decree are going forward as rapidly as possible, but owing to the wide scope of its measures and the extensive character of the industries affected, it was said the French and Belgian authorities would require several days more in which to work out the details before putting the plan into operation.

The decree will give the military authorities absolute power to take over all metal works, iron and steel plants, mines, coke ovens and virtually all other private industries in the Ruhr.

In the event the Germans refusing to operate the plants after the requisition, the decree provides jail sentences up to 15 years, and in addition heavy fines for the directors of the companies or others responsible for the resistance.

In cases of sabotage to hinder the work of the plants, requisition, those responsible will be tried before court martial and upon conviction will be subject to the death penalty.

The decree will be most sweeping, giving the military authorities, in collaboration with the French civil commission, the right to exploit the industries themselves or to lease the plants to concessionaries if this is deemed more to the interests of the occupation authorities in their plan to obtain reparations.

Declines Post On Proposed Wheat Board

General Manager of Grain Growers Will Not Act

Winnipeg.—J. R. Murray, General Manager of the United Grain Growers Limited, announced that two weeks ago he had declined the offer of the chairmanship of the proposed wheat board; that the offer had not been renewed, but that he was of the same mind should he be approached again. Premier Greenfield of Alberta, on behalf of himself and Premier Dunning of Saskatchewan, had made the offer, said Mr. Murray, and the executive of his company were prepared to grant him a year's leave of absence should he desire to accept.

Baby Cutting Teeth Was Very Sick With Diarrhoea

When the baby starts to cut its teeth, especially during the hot weather, then is the time that the poor mother is under the stress and strain of great anxiety.

There is no remedy so safe and effective for the teething complaints of infants, as Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry; no remedy that has had the endorsement of so many Canadian mothers during the past 78 years it has been on the market.

Mrs. C. W. Myers, Clamwilliam, Man., writes: "My baby girl was very sick with diarrhoea when she was cutting her teeth. I tried several different remedies, but nothing did her any good. She was getting worse when my mother sent me out a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I gave her a few doses and the next day she was much better, and in a couple more days she was as well as ever."

Now, I always keep 'Dr. Fowler's' in the house and recommend it to all those troubled with diarrhoea."

BARTH'S ORCHESTRA
EVERYBODY WELCOME!

Spring-time Revelry in Garden City

1—Mrs. Walter Nichol, placing the commemorative wreath.
2—Parliament buildings at Victoria as seen from grounds of Empress Hotel.
3—Queen of the Maritime Provinces at Victoria B.C., in her royal coach.
4—Queen Bess Hall, entrance at the entrance to the Parliament Hill Plaza.

THIS year the citizens of Victoria, B. C., celebrated the sixtieth birthday of this garden city and for three days beginning with the twenty-fourth of May the city frolicked. During the previous week the M. J.
Queens had been chosen and with her maids of honor had travelled to neighboring cities inviting her sisters and brothers from Nanaimo, Vancouver and New Westminster, and her cousins from Seattle, Bellingham and Portland to join in a three day frolic in her delightful gardens. The neighboring cities responded to her bidding to the extent of sending their Mayors and hundreds of their populace to take part in the spring time revelry.

The initial ceremony of the three day fête was performed when Mrs. Walter G. Nichol, wife of the Lieutenant Governor of the province of British Columbia placed a beautiful floral wreath on the handsome bronze statue of Queen Victoria which stands before the parliament buildings. If the name of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire. The landing of the May Queens from H.M.C.B. Patricia followed the ceremony, a tender bearing their Majesties to the "boudoir" where they were given the freedom of the city by Myron Maynard and were crowned by His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of British Columbia.

Then came the Grand Parade entered into by almost every automobile in the city and participated in by every public spirited firm and individual at Victoria.

Bellingham, Wash., Nanaimo, and Esquimalt picturesque floats and the recently inaugurated Canadian Pacific motor ferry plying between Vancouver Island and the former city gave hundreds of Americans an opportunity to enjoy a real twenty fourth of May celebration.

Four and the three days many sports events were arranged and on the Thursday and Friday evenings elaborate balls were given in the armories and at the Empress Hotel. Amid the historical surroundings of Beacon Hill, where as the name implies beacon fires were built in the early days for the guidance of sailors off the Island coast the picturesque Frolic Festival was staged on Friday. The Passing of the Festival was the title given this much heralded event which portrayed the indolence and reformation of many ages of civic growth.

Saturday, as other days, witnessed hand concerts given throughout the city streets from early morning until late at night. A home-made circus and regatta provided matinee entertainment at the Gorge and the theatrical night attack by Indians staged in these natural surroundings recalled very vividly the pioneer days of Vancouver Island and brought to a close a five carnival of brilliant splendour when the Queen of the Pacific Cities paid homage to the memory of her royal name sake Victoria the Good.

The Grove vs. Stony.

Stony Plain ball team won another game last week from a team at Spruce Grove. It wasn't exactly a Grove team, at that, as Stony provided its own full team and also four players for the opposition. 'Twas a good practice game for the local team, which has its eye on the baseball prize to be given July 2d. Some good play was seen, particularly the bat work of the Stonyites. Mr Bell, garage-man, umpired in a satisfactory manner.

No Wheat Board This Year

Just as everybody interested in the formation of the Wheat Board in time to handle this year's crop, along comes the information that this project has been abandoned. This seems final, as a signed statement given out last Saturday by the Premier of Saskatchewan and the Premier of Alberta says: "We have found it impossible to secure a Board combining all the necessary elements of experience, ability and public confidence."

Results at the Rifle Range
